25X1

Between 1 August and 13 August 1953, the Cabinet Council in East Germany, the State Planning Commission, and the State Secretariat for Motor Vehicle Traffic and Roads in East Berlin discussed the abolition of gasoline rations. [redacted] 25X1
[redacted] except for difficulties regarding the sales price, the abolition of the ration system was possible as a result of increased production and that, by mid-August, the districts had repeatedly been supplied with gasoline. He 25X1 believed that gasoline would be unrationed in about mid-September 1953, and that lignite tar and lignite soft pitch would follow soon. . .
